ARTIST STATEMENT

My work has two clear focuses – the first being the human narrative and the second an interest in two-dimensional representations of space, in particular those that predate or break away from the central perspective developed in the renaissance. My method of creating meaningful content in my paintings is one where the narrative is informed by every aspect of the work. It is created not only through the recognizable imagery, but also through the way in which that imagery is painted, through stylistic breaks, or the color and material quality of the paint. And included within the narrative are my own decisions as the painter. The painter as fallible, struggling human, capable of wild ambition, bitter disappointment, unbridled self-indulgence or a longing for beauty - in the very same way that the represented figures are - is a construction that informs and guides my work, allowing me to make my own role as the artist a theme and emphasizing the work itself as a human product.
